

The Centre for Children's Rights Studies of the University of Geneva is pleased to organise the 5th edition of the Children's Rights Research Symposium (CRRS) for doctoral researchers. Theme of the symposium is:

Conversations between Children's Rights and Childhood Studies

Through a series of plenary conversations and paper presentations, the symposium wishes to address where and how children's rights studies have taken on board insights from childhood studies, and vice versa. In particular, we want to explore how individual researchers navigate their ongoing research projects between the rich and diverse histories, concepts, theories and methodologies of both fields.

Call for papers

We cordially invite doctoral researchers working on one or several of the many crossroads between children's rights and childhood studies to present their ongoing research. The topics and issues proposed should allow for discussions between different perspectives, both theoretical and methodological, and foster opportunities for synergy and interdisciplinary thought. Doctoral researchers at the very beginning of their research are encouraged to present a poster. Deadline for submission is 14 May 2017.
