In the context of the 2018 Geneva Peace Week and in partnership with the International Bar Association's Human Rights Institute (IBAHRI), this event will address forced displacement and demographic engineering in Syria.

On this occasion, a high-level panel composed of United Nations and independent experts, as well as Syrian civil society actors, will discuss two major issues:

- The systematic patterns of forced displacement and legislative and policy frameworks demonstrating demographic engineering in Syria, with a view to assessing their compliance with international humanitarian and human rights law
- Pitfalls and challenges in any upcoming reconstruction and return plan, with a view to suggesting recommendations to the international community, in light of past experience in other countries.

MODERATOR

- Barbara McCallin, Independent expert on forced displacement, housing, land and property

PANELISTS

- Marco Sassòli, Director, Geneva Academy of International Humanitarian Law and Human Rights
- Cecilia Jimenez-Damary, UN Special Rapporteur on Human Rights of Internally Displaced Persons (TBC)
- Toby Cadman, UK Barrister, Guernica 37 (TBC)
- Syrian Lawyers (TBD)
